‘Air Safety & Wind Farms’ by Philip Benstead

Friday 12th April 2019

Wind farms have been in existence since the mid-1980s but still cause controversy whenever a new one is proposed. One of the main areas of concern is their perceived ‘impact’ on anything that flies and in turn on our national infrastructure and security. Philip will consider the many myths, some propagated by ‘experts’, and by drawing on nearly 20 years of related experience, will offer an alternative view by using ‘real world’ examples including an imaginary civil flight.

Philip works as an independent consultant and is currently advising several European governments on such aspects as renewable energy, air space management and matters relating to drones including revenue generation, detection, classification and counter measures.
